Hours later – when I feel pain on my back from sitting, my hair is styled and dry, and my almost invisible makeup has been applied – Jane tells me it's time to dress up for the runway. We've been waiting until the last minute, refusing any refreshments I eat might accidentally fall onto my costume and stain it. There's only thirty minutes left until the show starts, and the nerves that have been torturing Jane seem to have escaped her, choosing a new victim in me. My palms are sweating, and I have butterflies in my stomach. Nearly all the models are ready, some of them already dressed in their nineteenth century costumes. Jane tightens my corset.
