M: Hello, everyone. These days, children tend to have vision problems because of too much time spent on digital devices, and many parents are worried about it. However, there are things you can do to keep your child's eyes healthy. First of all, set screen time limits for your child. Second, provide your child with nutritious foods, such as vegetables, fruits, nuts, and fish. They contain nutrients that are good for your child's eyes. Third, have your child wear protective glasses when they play outside in the sun. Last but not least, have your child's eyes examined regularly. Remember that prevention is better than cure. Next are smart refrigerators. They allow the user to monitor food items inside. They can even show relevant recipes that can be made with those items. There are also smart speakers. Speakers controlled by voice commands can do various tasks such as creating a play list and searching the Internet.
