In addition to lighting up a room, they can make an ordinary room special with their smell. Research suggests that the smell of candles does more than just improves the atmosphere; it can also affect how you feel. Some smells can actually lower stress levels. For example, lavender is said to help relieve stress and anxiety. Vanilla is also known to reduce stress with its comforting effect. Some smells tend to promote positive emotions. For example, rosemary provides a feeling of satisfaction. Jasmine can help to overcome sadness and depression. Why don't you use scented candles to revive yourselves?
